The Jargon of Landscape

“We’ve got mile after mile and acre after acre of land for our future prosperity. No other city in the world has got, right in it’s centre, such opportunity for profitable progress. So it is important that the right people mastermind the new London. Proven people with nerve, knowledge and expertise. That, ladies and gentlemen, is why you are all here today.”

‘Harold’, The Long Good Friday,
John Mackenzie (1980)

Private View 6-10 pm Friday 8th February 2008

Out of the jargon of authenticity is constructed a landscape that is at once chilling and comforting. In defining our identity, what must we cling to throughout the construction?
